In every instance the fire took place in an apartment house where a number of lives were endangered by the blaze. One death is reported as a result of the series of fires. The unusual number of fires was a marter of comment in this district Friday, but it was not until the newspapers came out yesterday morning with a tabulated record and binted at the possibility of an organized going of firebugs that the cotament became universal. The newspaper stories had the effect of setting the Central Office detectives to work in the district. Quietly as the headquarters men went to work their presence was manifest in the district all day and added to the general uncasiness. As usual when a subject is universally discussed, the facts become amagnified, and the fear of the more timerous was correspondingly increased.

The streets in the vicinity of the scenes of the fires just night presented an unusually lively appearance. Policemen in citizen's clothes and Central Office detectives were stationed at every and the policy are as far from solving the registery, if mystery it is, as ever. Chief Bonner did much to give color to the rumor of an organized gang of firebugs by expressing an opinion that the fires were the work of looters. Coming from an expert of his long experience the opinion was bound to carry some weight.

The men who are watching the district are not novices. Under Acting Inspector McClusky are Detectives Tites, Mechan, Rinn and Herson and others. These men have had similar experience in dealing with the ontbreak of arson and pillage three years ago in the neighborhood or Eighth-ave, and One-hundred-and-thirty-seventh-st. As a result of this investigation, the Cultrits were identified. In this case there does seem to be the slightest clew to work on.

The police say that in the cellar of all the houses where the fires have occurred a great lot of rubbish has accumulated, and that a spark in them would set the whole building ablaze. CAPTAIN COONEY'S THEORY.

Acting Captain Cooney said last night: "I have so far ascertained nothing that would establish the belief that these fires are the work of an organized gang. I believe that in each case they are entirely accidental. That so many have occurred in one district, of course, is strange, but 1 believe that it is only a coincidence. The theory of burglars and looters is not borne out by reported losses. The police have been vigilant, and during the various fires have warned away suspicious characters, but no more than would naturally

The people who were driven last night from their homes in the apartment-houses at Ninetysecond-st, and Columbus-ave, are firm in their theory of incendiarism, and some of them declared their intention to leave the neighborhood at the earliest opportunity.

Among the first of the routed tenants to return to the scene of the Friday night fire were Mrs. Levi with her dog, which was taken from the burning building by the firemen; Mrs. Momard, Benjamin Wood and Mrs. Taylor, who were driven out by the smoke, and who all tell the same story of the fire. All the tenants except Mrs. Levi found that their apartments could be made habitable, and went to work to make the best of their condition

At No. 104 West Ninety-second-st., C. A. Warner said he saw a supposed incendiary crouching in the doorway. The fire was discovered in a small comparement in the rear of the basement on the passageway through which the baker and butcher boys go to put their goods on the dumb waiter. In the compartment within a few inches of a wooden partition was the pile of paper and scraps which was burning. The pile lies within six feet of the foot of the dumb waiter shaft, and in the opinion of the police might have been easily ignited by the accidental throwing of a match by a butcher boy who delivered a quantity of goods to a family on the third floor a few tooments before the fire was discovered.

CARELESSNESS OF JANITORS. In the cellar of G. Polycrana's flower-store, at No. 663 Columbus-ave., under the apartment-house, No. 75 West Ninety-second-st., where the Friday night fire was discovered, five barrels were stored, with tissue and waxed paper, which had ployes of the establishment had been working in the basement until half an hour before the smoke aroused the people of the floors above. The entrance to the basement is next to Chapman's laundry, at No. 665, and, so far as could be learned no one was seen to enter the cellar during that time. James Livingstone, who lived in the east side of No. 75 West Ninety-second-st, and who constructed the building, however, favors the theory of incendiarism.

A dozen workmen went to work tearing the cornices from the room of the Colonial Bank Building and removing the loose bricks and stone which have been a constant menace to pedestrians. Ropes have been stretched across the pavement about the building to shut out the crowds.

Fifteen policemen were detailed by Captain Comes to canvess the neighborhood and warn jantters and tenants to burn all waste paper at once and to allow a more to account to the captain once and to allow as more to account to the captain.

Jamers and to allow no more to accumulate.

Detective-Sergeant McClusky, who is in charge of the Detective Bureau, does not believe that the outbreaks have been of incendiary origin. Fire Marshal Mitchell is also conducting a rigid examination, and had a number of householders, who have suffered in the recent authreaks, in his office yesterday, asking for all the circumstances they knew regarding the origin of the fires. EXAMINATIONS BY THE FIRE MARSHALS.

The examinations were strictly private. The marshal said to a reporter that he could not, from the evidence deduced, determine whether the numerous fires were the work of firebugs or mercly accidental happenings. He seemed, however, inclined to the latter view.

Deputy Marshals Wilson and Malignon have been assigned to work up the fires on the grounds. They are busy taking evidence, and no report will be made before to-morrow or Tuesday.

Tuesday.

Deputy Fire Marshals Wilson, Freil and Malig-non visited the scene of the fires during the day and made a thorough inspection. The janitors, Charles Johnson, of No. 85 West Ninety-second-ett, and Samuel Newman, of No. 104, were ques-tioned carefully. Johnson could not throw much tioned carefully. Johnson could not throw much light on the mystery, however.

He said that there was nothing in the cellar that could have become ignited except the five barrels of waste paper. He said that for half an hour before the five broke out there was no one in the cellar that he knew of, as the door leading in the cellar that he knew of, as the door leading to the south room was locked, and he carried the key. C. A. Warner, who saw from his kitchen window, on the third story of No. 194, the unknown man crouching in the areaway, relierated his statement, and said that he was positive the man was a stranger, and that he was there for an evil purpose. Mr. Warner said the man was crouching down, as if in hiding, and that as soon that he was the said him at the window he gave a fellow spied him at the window he gave a s the lenow spied him at the window he gave a cared look at the other windows and bolted own into the cellarway. When Mr. Warner eached the cellar the man had disappeared. The ladder which was found in the back yard

From The Scottish-American.

From The Scottish-American.

The Glassow police force is a fine and well-disciplined body of nearly 1,400 men. Size and strength have been counted prime qualifications in their selection, and their average height is just under six feet. Their average height is just and their average leads of service is ten years. They are organized under a chief constable, ten superintendents and twenty-eight heutenants, with a number of inspectors and sergeants in innucliate command of the patroline or ordinary constables.

A majority of the men are Highlanders. They are of excellent personal character as a rule, and very faithful in the performance of routine duties. The force is universally praised by the clitzens, and those complaints and expressions of criticism and distrust one hears in any American city are unknown in Glaszow. The chief uses his own discretion in the selection of new men, and there is no ordeal of competitive examination to be passed. The selection of the chief tilke all other chief contables in Scotland, is made by the Secretary of State for Scotland, of course generally on recommendation of the local authorities. Varancles in the other offices are usually filled by promotion. From top to bottom the police zervice commands admiration and confidence.

In the police courts justice is dispensed by those members of the Council, ten in number, who have been elected by their feliows as ballies or magistrates. Assisted by a legal professional gentleman of standing as assessor. There is also a stipendary magistrate (also appointed by the Secretary for Scotland, but since the death of Stipendary Genmel he office has been vacant. He receives a good salary. The general police government of the city also employs a law officer or attorney known as the "Procurator Fiscal," who conducts prosecutions when necessary in the caforcement of the sanitary and other statutes and regulations ad
